

Nader Elguindi Biography

Nader Elguindi is an expert on leadership and motivation. As a U.S. Navy submarine officer, Nader experienced a horrific motorcycle accident that severed both of his legs, causing him to permanently lose his right foot. Undeterred, he embraced his injuries and became the first naval officer to complete his submarine qualifications and earn the coveted “Dolphins” with a prosthetic leg.

After leaving the Navy, Nader became a tireless entrepreneur and built a consulting firm, Cydecor, from scratch, acquiring such clients as Hendrick Automotive Group, Duke Energy, and BSN medical. Following the collapse of the technology market in 2000, Nader reinvented himself and his company once again, building from the foundation of Cydecor and venturing into government contracting.

Today, Nader serves as president of his consulting firm, Cydecor, which represents federal clients—including the Navy. In fact, ten years after Nader’s accident, he was able to again work with his beloved Navy when Cydecor was awarded one of the largest small business contracts in history.
